EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

Address of Representative Robert W. Hemphill, Rock Hill, S.C.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

OF

HON. OLIN D. JOHNSTON

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

Wednesday, August 17, 1960

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the remarks of the Honorable ROBERT W. HEMPHILL, Member of the House of Representatives from the Fifth District of South Carolina, delivered on July 25 at Rock Hill, S.C.

Representative HEMPHILL paid tribute to the late C. Harris Williams of Rock Hill, S.C. Mr. Williams was one of the great humanitarians of our day and it was through his kindness of heart and sincere personality that made all the people of South Carolina have so much love and respect for him.

The people of South Carolina feel it appropriate to erect a memorial to Mr. Williams at McDow Park, which is in the city of Rock Hill. I feel it very fitting that Representative HEMPHILL's address to those gathered at this event be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

How GLORIOUS IT IS TO LIVE

(Address by Representative ROBERT W. HEMPHILL on the occasion of the dinner of the C. Harris Williams Memorial Fund at Joslin Park, Rock Hill, S.C., July 25, 1960)

Mr. Chairman, my good friend Billy Hayes, honored members of the C. Harris Williams

Memorial Fund Steering Committee, honored senator and members of the York County legislative delegation, distinguished guests of near and far, and fellow friends of the late and beloved we gather to honor this evening.

I have been honored many times by invitations to speak to groups or assemblies, each time in humble reflection of my inadequacies, gratitude at the opportunity of discussion and fellowship, but no occasion has aroused by reflection on good deeds, or good works, as this occasion. Each of us, I am sure, has rejoiced in many friendships, experienced the warmth of treasured companionship, leaned on the sympathy of great understanding, and eagerly sought the compassion and understanding of a fellow traveler on the high road of today's civilization—and all of us have had the good fortune of knowing and loving as a good friend, our late and great friend, Harris Williams. Tonight and always we delight to do honor to his memory and perpetuate his good deeds.

When we think of the way of life he expressed, we are reminded of the poem:

"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths; in feelings, not in figures on a dial.

We should count time by heart throbs. He most lives

Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best"—Bailey.

To all of us who love nature there are days so glorious and exhilarating that life is a certain conquest, nights so filled with radiance that we are sure of our destiny, resolved to our duty of usefulness. Such was every day and night to Harris. His life was a mission—of joy, of help, of happiness, of fun, of faith, of usefulness. Never seeking the acclaim of high office, too big to be charmed by the little pleasures of personal acclaim, he went his way doing good, spreading sunshine, showing by example how glorious it was and is to live, to inspire, to help a fellow man.

His loyalty was legion. His loved ones, his home, his church, his country, his community, his business, his friends, all enjoyed the fierce loyalty of his devotion. One could but mention his family, and his face would glow with pride and love. No friend ever dropped in but "Won't you drop by the house?" automatically signaled his love and family pride.

He became a legend long before his time. One of the stories about him tells of his instrumentality in getting robes for his church. They teased him about a request that "C. Harris Williams Gulf Service" be lettered on the back. His spontaneous grin at the joke was quickly followed by his invitation to "come down to Neely's Creek next Sunday and join us." He loved his church and he served its purposes—how many were his charities will never be known—the good he did was exemplary of a Christian life.

He served his country in time of war and in time of peace.

"The man who loves his home best,
And loves it most unselfishly,
Loves his country best."

—Holland.

Such was only part of his service. I personally remember his unstinting service as a member of the York County grand jury, unstinting, unselfish, interested, untiring. He never shirked a duty, gloried in every task for public good. He accepted every appointment to commissioner and to boards carrying duty without remuneration, work with little chance of appreciation or praise. In his home county are statues or progress bearing the indelible imprint of his character and devotion.

He loved politics. He knew the increasing role of politics in the life of the Nation. He could have run for any office with assurance of voluminous support, confident of election. His ability was well known, his concern for his fellow man an every day effort, and his love for people was salutary. Instead, he participated with tremendous vigor, finest sportsmanship, and greatest loyalty. Happy and fortunate was the candidate who had his friendship. To him politics was fun, though a necessity. He believed in—

"The freeman casting, with unpurchased hand,

The vote that shakes the turrets of the land."

—Holmes.

Yes; he bet on politics. If he won, he never chided the loser; but if he lost, his was the loudest, the best sportsmanship, publicly acclaiming his mistake, laughing his way into the hearts of his opposition. He was known, loved, respected—never hated. Judge and jurymen, legislator, senator, sheriff, clerk, and constable all sought his advice, basked in the sunshine of his friendship. Would that more men took such interest in politics—every election would present a challenge, every political aspirant a seeker of high purpose as a requisite of high office.

As we move from horizon to horizon in the life of this good man we reflect on a few of the intimate personal expressions of his belief:

A community that could always count on Harris to be in the forefront.

Almost every parade in a nearby town knew "Mister Rock Hill" was there.

No Federal court ever met in Rock Hill but the admiration of court officials brought this smiling citizen to the courtroom.

No visiting judge ever had a complete term in York unless he met Harris.

No horse show could hope for success without him.

He never asked for himself—always for others.

I know of many men who received the mercy of the court because of his insistence.

I know of men inspired of great service in public office because of his sustaining friendship.

I know of young men now training in the military academies because he sponsored them.

Like others, I cannot know the full measure of his charity; he used his talents to bless his fellow men; but I hope to echo here the silent praise of people everywhere, people who have been helped or guided, a chorus of gratitude for good works.

And so in fitting tribute we gather here tonight determined to perpetuate his memory in the lives of young people tomorrow and in the future.

And as the young of succeeding generations find happiness and seek guidance for usefulness under optimist guidance, I hope the story of Harris Williams will be told and retold. And those who knew and loved him as a friend will remember:

A friend, in work, in play, in sorrow;
The same yesterday, today, and tomorrow.

And others, blessed by his charity, heartened by his smile, made happy by his association, or just a silent admirer, will recall his way of living a glorious life.

If you can give the unforgiving minute

Sixty seconds' worth of distant run,

Yours is the world and all that's in it,

And, what's more, you'll be a man, my son.
Thank you.

SENATE

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1960

(Legislative day of Thursday, August 11, 1960)

The Senate met at 10 o'clock a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the Vice President.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, who settest the solitary in families, and families in nations, and nations in the common bond of humanity, beyond and above all the frontiers which we mark and guard may we be caught up into Thy great purposes, finding in Thee the goal of all our striving and the end of all desire.

Deliver us from thoughtless content with ourselves and from narrow contempt for others. Give us to see on this shrinking globe that all are bound up in the same bundle of life together.

If the soiled fingers of the world have tarnished our integrity, burnish us once again in Thy presence, that whatsoever is excellent, beautiful, and of a good report may shine in our eyes and become again the object of our care, our faith, and our devotion.

In the dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. JOHNSON of Texas, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Wednesday, August 17, 1960, was dispensed with.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States submitting a nomination was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Hawks, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

As in executive session,

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting the nomination of Gen. George Henry Decker, U.S. Army, for appointment as Chief of Staff, U.S. Army, which was referred to the Committee on Armed Services.
